Coroner's Inquest on the Drowning Case.—Yesterday Coroner Van Mater, of Hoboken, held an inquest upen the body of Samuel C. Keller, who resided in the eity of New York, who committed suicide by leaping from the Hoboken ferry boat Newark, on Sunday evening, while eressing from New York to Hoboken. The verdict of the jury was as follows:—"Said Samuel C. Keller came to his death by drowning in the North river, on the afterseen of the 10th day of June, 1855; and we further exgress cur belief that the deceased, of his own accord, jumped off of the ferry boat Newark for the purpose of destreying his life—the pilot and other men of the said beat having used every means in their power to save the life of the deceased." It dees not appear, from the svidence, or from the facts as otherwise obtained yesterday, that Capt. Havens, the pilot of the boat, the engineer, or ether officers, were guilty of any negligence whatever.
On the contrary, Capt. H. has been a pilot upon the Hoboken ferries for the past twenty-six years, and is regarded as one of the most skilful and faithful pilots upon any of the ferries. He has saved the lives of twenty persons by the boats of which he has had com mand. It also appears that the lifeboat was in good condiction, but swamped while the two deck hands were getting the drowning man into it, in consequence of a heavy swell while it lay in a trough of the sea. No arrest have been made in connection with this affair.

A Song for the Hat—the Graceful Hat?
So rich in its gloss and form;
Like a beauteous wreath it glows in the sun,
Like a helmet in the storm.
What a finished air it gives the brow,
What a grace no words can sing!
Its curve was caught from the white swan's neck,
And its sweep from the eagle's wing.
Then a song for the hat—the real hat!
Not one that would make the ghost
Of a heaver sigh, if it could escape
From the pale Plutonian host;
But a hat ever which it would exclaim,
"Not in vain in the woods I died.
For the ball sent my soul to the martyr's rest,
And my fur to ESPENSCHEID."
At 118 Nassau street.
